103-year-old former resident visits Kidron

“Ralph who? Cornell? No, never heard of him.” Neither had we, until last summer. To get acquainted, a “meet Ralph” day was set up on October 14th at the Heritage Center.

Ralph, now 103 years old, showed up with a smile. Though he has not lived in the Jericho area for over ninety years, he loves to come back to visit. With him were his daughter, Lois McAllister, and granddaughter’s husband, Jay Bomze. They brought along a family Bible and some photos of Ralph in his younger days—in a new suit even—before his family moved to Massillon in 1915.

Help! We need your sawdust!

A few months ago, the KCHS board embraced a unique and exciting idea for the 2008 display and launched the plans to make it happen. However, your help is needed to bring this project to realization.

The CommuniTree project is still in its planning stages, with the actual work ahead. But this is the time when we need to hear from you.

Do you or someone you know have the skills to work with wood? We have free materials for craftspeople who are willing to create items to be donated to KCHS. These items will form the 2008 annual display and then become the 2009 Members Banquet auction items.

Please call Wayne Liechty at 330-857-3681 or Prudy Steiner at 330-857-1927 by January 31 to be part of this exciting project!

New software for old artifacts

The KCHS recently purchased PastPerfect, a database that organizes historical society information from membership to mailings to accessions (a detailed catalog of historical items owned by a society). This software will be invaluable in gathering and preserving information for research, planning and preparing ownership documents. In October, Leora Gerber, Glenn Miller, Judie Nussbaum and Prudy Steiner attended a training workshop in the use of the museum software.

Volunteer Glenn Miller has created electronic data records for more than 100 items in the KCHS collection, having spent 3-4 hours per week for several weeks on this project.

Noteworthy dates!

Two major annual events in the life of KCHS are coming up in the next couple of months, so be sure to put them on your calendars now!

The Society’s annual meeting will be held on Tuesday, February 27 at 7 p.m. All members and friends are welcome to attend this meeting which will open with a business session and conclude with a presentation by J. Augspurger titled “East Africa Revisited: Old and New Friends.”

Then on Tuesday, April 24, members are invited to gather at the Kidron Menno-nite Fellowship Hall for the annual Members Banquet. Invitations will be mailed later this spring giving more details on the meal, presentation and auction for the evening. After the banquet, members are invited to the grand opening of the 2007 annual display, “Celebrations and Memories: Frakturs and Illuminations.”

We look forward to hosting you for these events.

Director's Desk by Prudy Steiner

Before accepting the job as director of the Heritage Center in mid-August, I called former director Bruce Detweiler Breckbill to get his counsel. In our conversation, he said the most helpful qualifications for a director are 1) to enjoy people and 2) to possess organizational skills.

After four months as director, I understand why Bruce mentioned these two qualifications. While I enjoy having things organized, it is the people who provide a strong network for the Heritage Center who have made this job a special experience.

Let's start with the committed group of people who make up the Kidron Community Historical Society Board. They invest a lot of time and energy to make sure the Heritage Center runs smoothly and continues to grow, and they have shown me a tremendous amount of support.

Next are the docents, our volunteers. I have thoroughly enjoyed meeting and working with them. Since it is a known fact that most of us take very little interest in our heritage until later in life, many of our volunteers have their own unique and interesting stories to tell—they want to keep their heritage alive. And in talking to them, I have discovered that I am related or connected with most of them in some way.

Of course I value all of our members. I am amazed at the number of people who are on our mailing list, and not only local people. Many no longer live in the Kidron area, but maintain connections to the original settling of this Sonnenberg area. We are thankful for each one. Each time I climb the stairs to the second floor of the Heritage Center, I am thrilled to see so many names listed on the "Heritage Club Members" plaque hanging on the wall. It is because of this support that the Heritage Center is known as one of the best in the area.

I look forward to working with and for all of you. When you are in Kidron, please stop in and see us.

Cornell continued

He remembers the day when the move was made with two hay-ladder wagons pulled by teams of horses.

But to back up a bit, Ralph was born in 1903 in a log house (no longer there) near the Jericho/Wenger Road intersection (the old Dan Bixler place). His father, Amiel, had come from the French-speaking part of Switzerland. His mother, Adelia (Henning), was from Ohio. The Cornells had a farm and also a small store behind their house. They raised, butchered and sold meat and "huckstered" other items purchased in bulk at McClain's Grocery. Ralph, the oldest of five children, recalls the trains running on the railroad near their property.

The first two years of Ralph's schooling were at Boone's School.

His teacher was Calvin Hofstetter. Then the family moved about a mile away, and Ralph went to Reed's School (located on a steep hill on the east side of Wenger Road where it intersects Western Road). One of the teachers there was Earl Tschantz. He tutored Ralph in spelling, which he liked, allowing him to win spelling bees.

Interestingly, Dave Gerber's father, Nathan, also born in 1903, attended Boone's, and was probably a pupil there at the same time as Ralph (1909-1911). (Dave himself was in the last class to attend Boone's School all eight years.)

There was attentive conversation between Ralph, his family, and the seven members of the Historical Society present that day. Afterward, Ralph took several members on a tour of the Jericho area, telling where his family had lived and where he went to school. That his mind, memory, sight and sense of humor are still intact was quite evident.

Ralph worked at Republic Steel, and later (post-WWII) developed a real estate and insurance business. He was married to Mabel Marie Keyser for 48 years, but now lives on his own. Ralph is a Rotarian, has a hobby farm, and is looking forward to renewing his driver's license next spring. Asked about the secret of longevity, he responded with a gentle smile, "Don't eat too much!"

30 Year Celebration of the Kidron Community Historical Society

After the Kidron Community Historical Society was officially chartered in 1977, many people spent the next few years searching for a building that could become a museum for their valuable historical records and artifacts.

Items that were donated were recorded first in a Sunday School classroom and later in the basement of the Fellowship Hall of the Kidron Mennonite Church. When the items became too numerous for the available storage space, it was evident that a change was needed. Could the holdings be moved to a larger, more permanent location?

The basement of the First National Bank in Kidron was ultimately chosen as the site for the premier exhibit of the Kidron Community Historical Society. The artifacts on display told the unique story of the Kidron Community. Fannie Amstutz, at that time the oldest resident in Kidron at age 98, cut the ribbon for the grand opening in 1985.

In 1992 John and Janet Sprunger offered to donate the land and the vacant Lehman Garage just west of the Kidron Square for the new museum.

The Board contacted the Ohio Historical Society who sent official representatives to Kidron to assist in properly setting up the museum. They also warned the Board that undertaking such a project meant lots of time, money, and persistence. But capable leaders such as Wayne Liechty, Delvin Nussbaum, and Paul Neuenschwander could not be daunted. The two-story building was completed for Kidron's 175th anniversary in 1994.

Credit goes to Paul and Anne Locher who purchased and dismantled a small log house on Lester Geiser's farm and donated it to be preserved in the first floor of the museum, Stanley A. Kaufman who was hired as technical consultant to train Ruth Moser and Celia Lehman to catalog and display items in the collection, Lloyd Vandersall who cataloged hundreds of books, the Kidron Community Council who contributed financial support from Kidron Machinery Sales, Roger Geiser who established the extensive genealogy database, Bruce Detweiler Breckbill who served as the first paid director of the Heritage Center, as well as many other people.

The exterior of the building was redesigned with a Swiss décor. The first floor displayed woodworking items, fraktur, linens, and clock- and organ-making tools for which the early Sonnenberg settlers were known. A door was rebuilt to accommodate the first fire truck built by Kidron Inc.

The second story is used for genealogical data entry and research; special annual displays which have included barns, churches, furniture, fine arts, fabrics, business displays; and storage of artifacts not currently on display.

So as we think back over the past 30 years of the Kidron Community Historical Society, it is evident that it was indeed the cooperative effort of many dedicated people who have made the Kidron-Sonnenberg Heritage Center an innovator in the development, collection, and displaying of historical community resources in Ohio.
